

Hero Dies

The small town of Bets-y-Llan was shocked today by news that local hero Chris Ewans was dead. Chris received the Fusiliers Medal in 2007 for outstanding contribution to extra-solar science. He had been part of an exploration team sent out in 2006 to explore the new planet of Gyron, when the some of the crew succumbed to a vicious bacterial plague. Chris, a chemist trained at Bangor University, saved the remaining crew by creating a novel drug to combat the plague.

Chris is survived by his spouse Ceri and three children Glyn, Kevin and Donna.
